

COMPENSATION HEARINGS MOVED

The court has currently listed next dates for compensation hearings as 19-22 Dec.

We'll let everyone know once the judge has confirmed the final details. We know this will be disappointing, but momentum is building, with the public and media joining us in calling out Qantas' illegal behaviour. We're holding a delegate briefing next week to answer questions on the court proceedings and will continue to provide updates as they come in.

We will continue to stand with you in this fight until we achieve justice for workers and will use the additional time we have to build the strongest possible case.

THE TIDE IS TURNING AGAINST QANTAS

Over the last two years, Qantas workers stood together and have been the only ones to hold management to account. Because of your efforts, millions of Australians are finally witnessing Qantas' lies. Well done for sharing your stories and keeping up the fight.

You can see below that you are having a huge impact. We need to keep showing the public the truth.

Nice one @qantas. A full hour after landing for baggage to arrive. I guess that's what happens when you illegally fire your workforce and outsource to the cheapest offshore company. Once service goes, the willingness to pay a premium goes too.
